

obtain, the necessary information or evidence of identity, then it may use alternative identity proofing processes, in accordance with its risk-based systems and controls, to do so.

Alternative identity proofing processes during the COVID-19 Pandemic

4.15.1A If a reporting entity is unable to establish the identity of a customer using the applicable customer identification requirements specified in Chapter 4 of the AML/CTF Rules because the customer possesses, but is unable to produce or provide, the necessary information or evidence of identity due to COVID-19 Pandemic measures, then it may use alternative identity proofing processes, in accordance with its risk-based systems and controls, to do so.

Note: Alternative identity proofing processes could include, but are not limited to, acceptance of multiple types of secondary identification documents where normally a primary identification document would be required.

4.15.2 If a reporting entity is unable to establish the identity of a customer in
